Minimum: 50 pax - Maximum: 180 pax

The personal invitation sent to your room sets the tone for the evening. It features attractive Indian patterns in keeping with the traditional invitations.

More than a themed party, this evening will give you an insight into true Indian culture. To add to the experience, the ladies meet in the conference room to dress in traditional Indian costumes. Charming hostesses wearing beautiful saris will escort you to dinner. The pathway leading up to the venue will be illuminated with decorative clay lamps which are traditionally lit for Diwali, an Indian festival commemorating the triumph of good over evil. Upon arrival at the restaurant, experience the traditional welcome to ward off evil effects and hostile influences. As is the tradition, the hostesses carrying trays with flower petals and small lamps will apply a paste called “tikka” to your forehead, right on the “third eye”. As the waiters offer the “lassi”, a welcome drink, you are all set for the party to begin. The rangoli, a colourful pattern display, takes centre stage on the buffet, complemented with candles and fairy lights. The tables will be decorated with flower petals, candles, lamps and colourful spices. All you have to do is relax and unwind to the sound of the sitar and tabla during dinner.

Marquees or Bedouin tents are compulsory at additional costs should the evening take place on the beach (enquire for rates)
